Around the Market*Dinner at Lowell's

It's been a long-time coming, this month Lowell's unveils a dinner menu, serving it late.

Breakfast and lunch will be business as usual, then beginning June 15 Mark and the gang will serve the new dinner menu until 10 p.m., with non-smoking table service on the third floor.

The second floor lounge will be business as unusual until 10 p.m., diner option available. Check out the fancy new bar menu with chili prawn tacos and smoked salmon quesadillas.

Enhancing the menu, as always, is three-floors of unobstructed views of Elliot Bay.

Lisa Harris presents work from the Palouse and more

Beginning June 2, the Lisa Harris Gallery welcomes two nationally recognized artists putting a new spin on the art of photography.

Sherry Karver combines her own black-and-white photographs of amusement parks highlighted with oil paints, taking onlookers on a journey by creating a nostalgic, re-techno-colored-Hollywood look.

Christopher Harris uses a pinhole camera to create soft, "painterly effect" chromogenic impressions of the grasslands of Washington's Palouse region, during different seasons.

Stop by during "First Thursday," from 6 to 8 p.m., for the artists' reception and opening of the exhibitions.

Art Stall Gallery has 'paint in' and new painting exhibition

The Art Stall Gallery is celebrating its 40 years in the Market with a "Paint-Out" Tuesday, June 7.

You can watch the stall's artists at their easels as they capture their favorite market scenes on canvas.

The Art Stall Gallery's featured artists for June are Genevieve Ashford and Willadene Torbenson who are presenting an exhibit titled, "The Power of Line".

The two artists, with contrasting styles, share their common interest in space defined by line. Ashford captures the essence of an object with the minimum brushstrokes of Sumi-e, while Torbenson divides space with maximum layers of color and bold line.

The exhibit runs from May 29 through June 24.

Sunset Thursdays
every week

Beginning June 2, the PDA begins this summer's series of Sunset Thursdays on Pike Place.

The weekly events are for farmers, artisans, commercial tenants and performers to get up and do what they do best. Look for musical performances, cooking demonstrations and an array Market-centric entertainment.

To host the event Pike Place will be closed from Stewart to Virginia between 5 and 9 p.m. A stage will be set up and so will tables and chairs for people to sit and enjoy the show.

'Brollies on Deck

Copacabana's colorful parasols are back, above the tables on their amazing roof-deck — one of the Market's best places to lunch.

The bountiful Bolivian bistro is a great perch from which to absorb the Market.

Marta Pelaez Morrow continues the Pelaez family's 40-year tradition of shrimp soup and special spices. Check out all-you-can-eat of Paella, Copa's speciality on Friday and Saturday, or pop in for sangria, mojitos, or an ice-cold PaceZa.

Local Color stages its first book signing

Friday, June 10, Robert "Bob" Parson Crosby (a.k.a. Tenor Man) will autograph copies of his latest book "Get Unstuck from Fundamentalism," his sixth book.

He'll be in the Local Color coffee shop, 1606 Pike Place, signing from 11 a.m. til 1 p.m., returning at 5 p.m. for another hour of signing followed by Crosby facilitating a discussion. Much of the editing was done within the Market.

Crosby uses stories garnered while vacationing in Italy last fall as a background to cut through what he calls "the fog of childhood literalism and adult confusion about leftovers from that child-faith." He believes the journey to spirituality lies beyond literal/fundamentalism, traditional doctrines and atheism.

He doesn't expect that many have yet read the book but looks to introduce ideas and respond to questions. He looks forward to questions and discussion surrounding exigent issues.. For more info check out www.getunstuck.org.

Be part of the Market
Centennial Book

The PDA is distributing questionnaires for Market employees, merchants, shoppers, buskers, residents or enthusiasts in any way to provide their personal perspective in the official centennial book.

The, as yet untitled, Pike Place Market 100-Year Commemorative Book will be published by Sasquatch Books. The book will include a litany of ever-elongating Market stories. Questionnaire questions include: What is your favorite month in the Market and why? What is the first tip you would give a new resident or visitor on how he/she should approach the Market? What faux pas or actions should tourists (or anyone) avoid?

For more information or to comment contact the PDA.

Organic farmers return to the Market

The Organic Farmers are back.

Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday local farmers will be back on the historic bricks of Pike Place selling their fresh grown produce and keeping the "Meet The Producer" tradition alive.

Keep an eye out for other organic options, such as worm casings and gardening devices. Come down and find out what CSA means, if you don't already know.

Count-down to Centennial continues

The countdown continues to the Market's 100th birthday, September 17, 2007.

The PDA and The Market Foundation are feverishly planning a host of events for the year-long birthday party. Still molten plans include a film festival, art shows and street festivals. Several books are in the works.
